Building the Resilience and On-Farm Biosecurity Workshop Series: The process of diagnosing plant health problems WEDNESDAY 2 AUGUST 2017

In collaboration with NGIQ, DAF will deliver a workshop aimed at providing information on how to improve decision making processes following the detection of a new plant health problem.

A number of aspects will be covered in this workshop including:

- A detailed process on how to diagnose unknown plant health problems. A range of problems will be discussed including those caused by insects, mites, diseases and abiotic stress. Management options and resources for many causes, including pesticides, will be discussed.
- Following on from above, attendees will be provided details of mock plant health problems in small groups. Each group will determine the cause of their problem to reduce or eliminate its impact.
- How to capture images of pest and disease problems cheaply. This will include options for in-field and office/lab photo capture.
- Pest and disease resources available to production nurseries through the levy funded project.

The workshop will be delivered by DAF entomologists and pathologists as part of the co-funded DAF, HIA and levy funded project “Building the resilience and on-farm biosecurity capacity of the Australian production nursery industry.”

Please bring the following:

- Plants that have an unknown problem. As much as possible, seal in a bag or box that contains the sample – we do not want to spread pests or diseases.
